Fancy Dress

TIXY VIXEN was very upset. Every year her school had a fancy dress competition. But every year Pony Rabbit won the first prize in the competition. Tixy only thought of creating mischief and so could not prepare well for the fancy dress. That is why she never got a prize.

On the other hand Pony Rabbit worked very hard and participated with good preparation. Once he dressed up like a tree by sticking leaves, fruits and raw vegetables on himself. He also

by Shubham Srivastav displayed a slogan, “Save trees, save Earth.”

Last year he had dressed up like a lion. He put on a lion mask and long false tail and a slogan, “Don't hunt for me, love me. Let me live, let me live.”

All the parents came to see the competition with joy and happiness.

Every time the stadium echoed with loud applause on Pony's performance. This year's Fancy Dress Competition had just 3 days to go. Tixy had not won a single competition till date. But this time she was determined that she would not let Pony win the competition.

She thought that Pony must have started preparing and also must be rehearsing at home.

She planned to one day quietly go to his house to find out what he was doing this time. She would then dress up as the same character.

This way in case the character won, both will win the prize.

When she went to Pony's place, she saw Pony was whitewashing his house, wearing dirty, torn and shabby clothes.

Tixy quickly came home and started rehearsing whitewashing.

The competition started after 3 days. All children were presenting themselves in different dresses.

Large crowd of animals were enjoying the show.

After some time it was Tixy's chance. She had got a brush and paint with her dirty smuggy clothes.

Seeing her everyone started laughing and heartily clapped.

Then came Pony's chance. But he had dressed up like an 'alien'.

He recited a poem like always, "In this land of yours, I come from Pluto planet with the message to love everyone."

The hall resounded with loud applause and when the result was declared, it was Pony who again won the first prize.

Tixy Vixen sobbed and sobbed.

Pony Rabbit asked, "What happened sister, why are you crying?"

Tixy replied, "You ditched me. I came to your house quietly. That time you were dressed as white-washer and on the day of the competition you dressed up as an alien."

Pony Rabbit laughed loudly and said, "You fool, that day I was not rehearsing. Due to rains the ceiling of my house started seeping with water. That is why I was whitewashing."

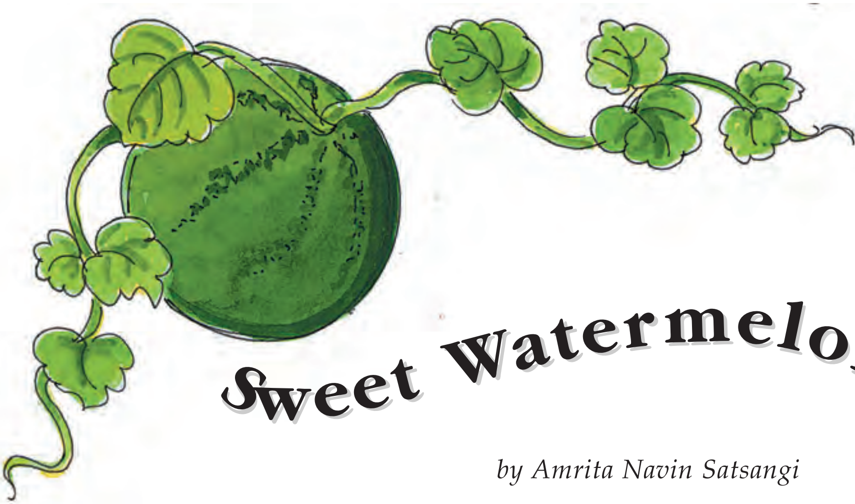

Tixy Vixen started laughing while she had tears in her eyes.

She realised that common sense was needed for copying too.

Pony Rabbit said, "We are friends from today and from next time we will prepare for the competition together."

Pony Rabbit was awarded a big chocolate box in the competition. Like a true friend he gave half of it to Tixy Vixen. ●

Sweet Watermelon

by Amrita Navin Satsangi

MEEKU MONKEY was upset as he was unemployed these days. It was a summer day and Meeku thought, 'In this summer why don't I sell watermelon. It will be profitable.'

He discussed it with Montu Elephant. Montu was in vegetable and fruit business. He had helped Meeku a lot.

For some days everything was well. But after some time he realised that fruits were being stolen from his farmhouse.

He was not able to recover the cost on selling the leftover fruits. Meeku got the broken walls of his farmhouse repaired. He got a boundary made around it to prevent thieves from entering inside.

But the next day was no different. Lots of fruits were missing from the fruit basket.

Meeku got annoyed at the fruit thief. When he could not stop the thief anyways, he thought of another plan.

He got big nails dug on the walls of the farm house.

Meeku had already planted a lot of trees around his farmhouse. He had put rope nooses near the trees.

He thought now the thief could not escape anyways and flee. But the next day he found all the nooses untangled and were staring at him.

This time more fruits than earlier were missing from the farmhouse.

One day, Jumbo saw that Meeku was very upset. Meeku told him about his trouble.

Jumbo explained to him, "Look Meeku, when big problems cannot be solved by big plans, one must resort to smaller tricks.

"Sometimes when things don't work with a sword, they can be done with the help of a needle. Understand?"

"What? How will a needle work for a sword?"

"Come, I will tell you," Jumbo said.

Jumbo took Meeku to his farmhouse godown and picking up a big watermelon said, "This will do the work of a needle."

"How?"

"Have patience. I will tell you."

Jumbo made a big hole in the watermelon and went to his friend, the Queen Bee.

"How are you here today dear Jumbo?" Queen Bee asked.

"I need your help today," Jumbo replied.

"What help, Jumbo? Tell me."

Jumbo told everything to Queen Bee.

After some thought Queen Bee said, "I am ready with my colleagues."

"Thanks, Queen Bee."

"This is my duty. There is no need to thank, Jumbo.

Now you can be rest assured."

Meeku was getting a fruit basket filled from Jumbo's godown.

At midnight, Meeku woke up hearing somebody's scream. Quickly switching on all lights and coming out of the house with a big stick he saw a shadow in black clothes running, trying to save itself from the bees.

The next day, Meeku saw that his neighbour Fardy Fox was in a bad shape.

His entire body and face was swollen.

Meeku broke out into a hearty laugh looking at his pathetic state as Fardy used to make tall talks about his courageous deeds.

It was clear from Fardy's stories that he was hurt badly while saving himself from thieves.

"But Fardy brother, one gets such marks when stung by bees," Fardy was nervous on hearing Meeku.

Placing a big watermelon in front of Fardy, Meeku said, "Will you eat watermelon, Fardy brother?"

Fardy was taken aback seeing the watermelon. But Meeku kept quiet.

The next day Meeku himself accepted his mistake and apologised.

Meeku was amazed at Fardy's behaviour.

"You saved me from being ashamed in front of everyone that day by not revealing it publicly. I promise that I will not steal anymore but work hard for a living," Fardy said.

Meeku forgave Fardy. ●

Minku and Monty

MINKU MONKEY and Monty Monkey lived in Sundervan. They studied in the same school. But Minku Monkey disliked Monty Monkey from the core of his heart. The more Monty Monkey tried to be friendly with Minku Monkey, the more he disliked him. The cold response by Minku Monkey used to make Monty Monkey very sad..

It was very hot the other day. Monty Monkey and Minku Monkey were bathing in the river. A crocodile also lived in the same river.

On finding right opportunity the crocodile caught Minku Monkey's leg. His other friends ran out of the river when they saw Minku Monkey was attacked by the crocodile.

Monty Monkey who was passing by the river heard Minku Monkey's cry for help. He ran towards the river.

Monty Monkey was scared when he saw Minku Monkey in trouble. But still he jumped in the river to save Minku Monkey.

Somehow, Monty Monkey dodged the crocodile. He rode his back and dug his nails in the eyes of the crocodile.

The crocodile felt intense pain in his eyes by the sudden attack. He released Minku Monkey but caught Monty Monkey.

Minku Monkey repented that though he was free from the clutches of the crocodile Monty Monkey had landed in the trouble because of him.

Minku Monkey quickly came out of the river and got hold a thick stick from a tree. He started hitting the crocodile with the stick.

The crocodile found himself caught between fighting 2 monkeys. He had no option but to release Monty Monkey as well.

Both Minku Monkey and Monty Monkey ran out of the river. Poor Monty Monkey was still bleeding. Minku Monkey was still feeling that Monty Monkey was injured because of him. He apologised to Monty Monkey and said, "Monty, I am really ashamed at my cold behaviour with you. You risked your own life to save my life. I am really grateful to you for saving my life."

Monty Monkey hugged Minku Monkey and forgave him for his cold behaviour.

After this incident Minku Monkey and Monty Monkey became close friends.

Egg in the Stadium

by Jamshed Azmi

MOTHER OSTRICH laid 2 eggs in her nest. On feeling hungry she hid them in a pile of dry leaves and went in search of food.

When she did not return for a long time, the smaller egg said, "Brother, mother has gone for a stroll. Why don't we too have a walk till she comes back?"

"No dear, whenever eggs have gone out from the nest, they have never returned. We must wait here for mother," said the bigger egg.

"Well, you seem to be real coward. Stay in the nest. I will go by myself," and the younger one jumped out from the nest.

Seeing him going, the elder egg shivered with the thought of any mishap. He shouted, "Wait, little one. It is not good to go alone. I will come with you."

The younger one was excited having the elder one coming with him. Both the brothers roamed around the jungle holding hands. The eggs were enjoying the fresh air of the jungle. They hopped and played in the grassy stretch and moved ahead.

On the way a wolf happened to see the eggs and his mouth watered. He whispered, "Wow! What nice big eggs they are. They can be a good satiating meal."

The wolf then came in their way and with his tongue rolling over his lips said, "You big fat eggs! Where are you going holding each other's hands? Come near me, I want to eat you."

Seeing death in front of them, the eggs started trembling. "Did not I tell you that it was not safe for us to move out of the nest?" the elder one said to the younger one.

"You did not listen. Now we are being punished for our foolishness."

"Brother, you are sensible. There must be some way to get rid of the wolf," younger one said.

An idea hit the elder one. He said, "Wolf sir, you can eat us but I want to touch your nose and feel it."

"Nose, but why?" the wolf was surprised.

"Mother told me that it is auspicious to touch the wolf's nose. So I want to touch your nose before death," said the elder one.

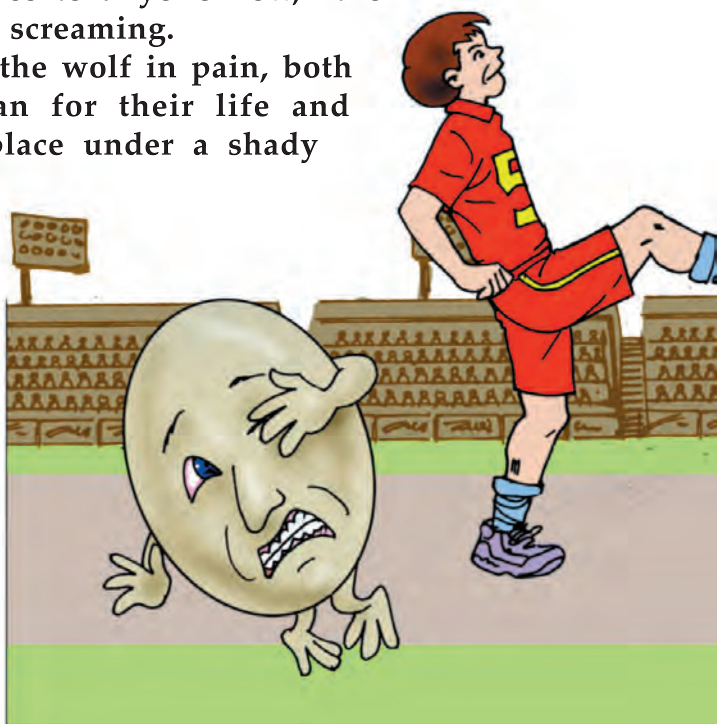

The wolf rolled his eyes and advanced his nose.

As the nose came near the elder egg, he did what he had thought. A hard hitting box hit his nose.

"Oh! The egg has broken my nose. I cannot show my face to anyone now," the wolf started screaming.

Leaving the wolf in pain, both the eggs ran for their life and finding a place under a shady tree, laid down to relax.

The elder one said, "We have barely escaped from getting into deep trouble. We have roamed a lot of jungle, now we should return to the nest."

"What are you saying? We have broken the nose of the trouble. It will not come back again. We can now roam as much as we like."

"Well, as you say," said the elder one.

Then he started following the little one. The elder one kept following wherever the younger one went in order to safeguard him.

Both landed in a stadium where a football match was going on.

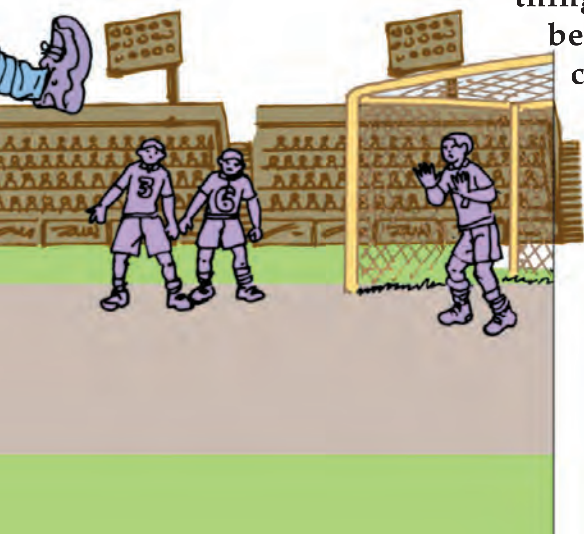

On reaching inside, the younger one saw that 22 players were hitting a ball with their feet. He got wild.

He shouted, "Look brother, all the players are together hitting an egg. We must save the egg."

"I do not think it is an egg. It is something that looks like an egg. We must wait here and try to understand the matter," the elder tried to explain.

"No, it is an egg. Poor thing, he is taking the beating since so long. I cannot see it being hit any more. Come on let us go and save him," the younger one asserted.

The elder one tried stopping his brother, "You are a fool. You have just arrived in this world. You must not do anything without thinking.”

But the younger one did not listen. Without giving a minute's thought he rolled up his sleeves and screamed, “Don't worry, brother. I am coming to save you. I will break the legs of those who are trampling you by their feet.”

He ran towards the ground. All the players in the ground were running behind the ball. They wanted to take the football towards each other’s goal post so that they could strike a goal.

The younger egg ran after the football to catch it. Suddenly, a player kicked the egg thinking it to be the football.

“Pich…” came the sound from the egg.

“Oh, these wicked people have broken me. Now I will not be saved. Wish I had listened to big brother,” and the egg lay silent.

The elder one felt bad seeing the younger brother crack. He whispered, “Oh, younger one is broken. I had explained him but he did not listen. I must now return to the nest or I too will die before time.”

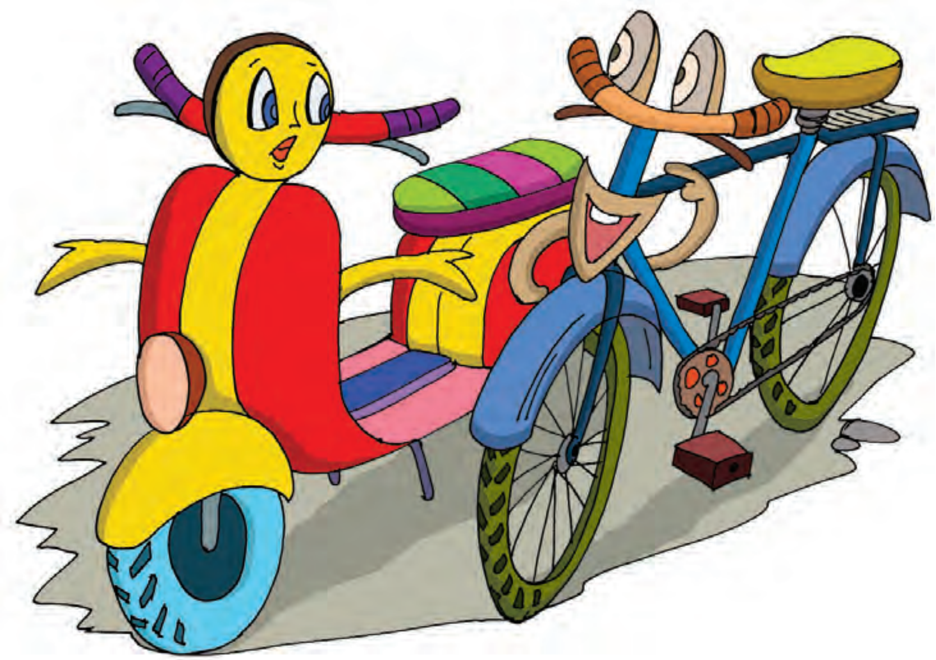

With a heavy heart he returned to go to his nest and sobbed and sobbed.

Mother came by then. When she heard the whole story from her elder egg, she was heartbroken. “It is none of your fault, son. The little one was foolish. He did not listen to you. That is why he got punished.”

Elder one clung to mother and slept off. He learnt a lesson and never went out of his nest alone ever. ●

"WHAT happened, brother? Why are you standing quiet, are you all right?" the bicycle asked as she stopped on seeing the scooter standing sad and alone.

"What to tell, sister. My petrol has finished because of which I am not able to move. My master is getting late for office. Can you help by giving him ride till the office?" the scooter

Result of Arrogance

by Indrajit Kaushik

requested, "I will be obliged."

"What favour? If we don't help each other in need then who will? After all, we vehicles have to run together," cycle agreed.

Making the master sit behind the cycle, it started running fast. As the cycle was returning happily after having left the master to his office, suddenly, somebody hit it from the back and it fell on its face.

Getting angry with pain the cycle yelled, "Can't you see? The road is so broad and you are hitting me and finding your way!"

A black coloured car who had hit laughed loudly, "Don't come in my way by mistake also. I am the queen of this road. The road is not made for weak cycles like you, understood?" brand new car said with arrogance.

The car had just arrived on the road from the showroom. It looked down upon the cycle.

The cycle silently moved on its way. This encouraged the car. After a distance it hit a motorcycle and dropped it too.

The headlight mirror of the motorcycle was broken and it got wild, "What nonsense is this?"

"Don't show eyes to me or you will meet such an end that you will not recognise yourself," the car shouted back.

The motorcycle tried its best to explain to the car to take control of its anger. "This arrogance is not good. This beauty will not stay for long."

By the time the car had left, it was becoming arrogant by the day. All the other vehicles tried to explain it to her that it is always wiser to live lovingly together. But to no avail.

One day, it rained heavily. Hail came along with a storm. Cycle, scooter, bikes, all stopped under the trees.

"You too come here, sister. We will all be safe," they offered to the car, "there is lots of space here."

"I do not want to insult myself by standing with you. Small vehicles like you are frightened of storms not strong ones like me," the car made a face.

Suddenly, 2-3 big hails hit the headlights of the car. The lights broke and the bulbs too gave way.

The car could no longer see anything in front. The hail had made it ugly and disfigured. The car was appearing like a beggar with glasses, lights, body and everything broken. Seeing her state the car wept. The beauty of which she was arrogant had been destroyed. It was the first time that the car was repentant of its behaviour.

'Had I listened to my younger sister and brothers, I would not have met this fate,' the car thought and tears rolled down her eyes. "Please forgive me," she said.

As the storm stopped, cycles and scooters and other vehicles started on their path. On the other hand, the broken car was shedding tears on its condition. ●

Chutku Rat

by Jamshed Azmi

MONU'S BACKYARD was a vacant space. This space was utilised by rats as their homes. The whole day these rats played and made mischief outside their burrows.

Chutku Rat would enter the burrows of other rats and eat whatever he found. All the other rats were very upset with this habit of Chutku. Chutku did not make any burrow for himself. He would spend his night hiding in others burrows. His day would be spent in search of food and in the evening, he would lie down under a bush. Because of this habit of Chutku, other rats called him 'lazy rat'.

Many times he would not go out in search of food also and keep sleeping under the tree. When the rats would go away, he would enter their burrows and find some food for himself.

In the evening, when all of them would return after collecting food, they would find him at the same place. All of them would tell stories about their day whereas Chutku would keep lying quietly. He would listen to them and wonder about their foolishness. 'They stupidly keep roaming from pillar to post in search of food,' he thought.

When Matku Rat saw that Chutku was still lying under the tree, he asked, "Are you all right?"

Turning his moustache, Chutku said, "Yes, absolutely. I am relaxing. A rat's life is to relax. If I were at all to work I would have been born as a donkey or a bull."

Matku replied, "That is all right but no matter who you take birth, you should work, whether it be small or big."

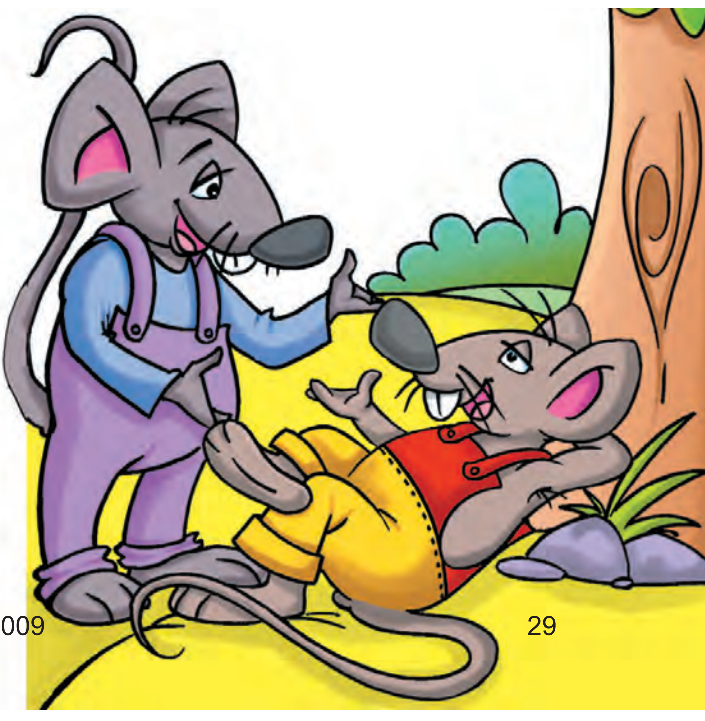

"It is for fools to work. Sensible people sit and eat and sleep," Chutku said.

Mutku did not deem it fit to talk to Chutku and so he went the other way. Chutku kept lying down shamelessly.

As it became dark, all the rats went into their burrows. Nobody spoke to Chutku.

When the place became lonely, Chutku got up and started walking up and down. As it was dark, he fell into a drain. He tried hard to escape but instead reached in the middle of the drain. The drain was big enough and because of fast water flow, he could not come to the edge.

He kept flowing with water for some time. After flowing some distance, his tail hit a stone. Chutku held the stone tightly with his claws but soon his strength started giving way. He could hardly see anything in the dark.

Suddenly, a log of wood came flowing and hit Chutku who was trying hard to hold on to the stone. He screamed.

He soon understood that it was a piece of wood and jumping on it he reached the banks. Now he tried climbing the walls of the drain. Unfortunately, he fell back.

He again found himself in the drain. But this time he fell on the piece of wood. His back was hurt and it pained badly. One foot was also hurting. He remembered Matku Rat's advice. Had he built up strength for himself, he would not have fallen in the drain.

He realised that had he worked hard like other rats, he would not have had to face such difficulties.

By then another piece of wood came floating in water and stopped near him. Giving it support, Chutku made it stand along a stone. Then climbing on it, he came out of the drain, heaving a sigh of relief.

His body was smelling of the dirty drain water. He saw a pit with clean water nearby. He dipped himself in the water and cleansed himself. Then hopping and jumping he went where he lived.

There was a colony of white rats on the way. Chutku wanted to hold on there but the guards of the colony did not let Chutku stop there.

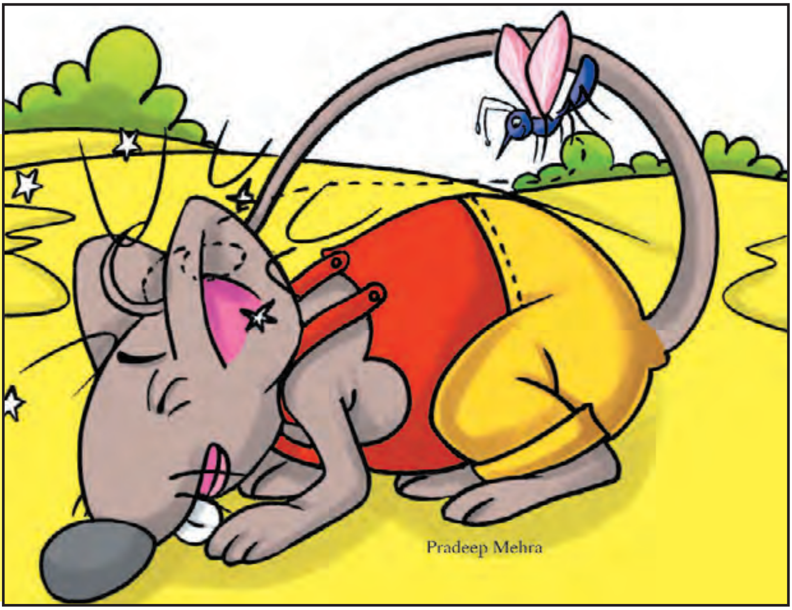

Frightened, Chutku finally reached his colony at midnight. He was feeling hungry. Getting inside other rats' burrow, he searched for some food. When he reached Matku's burrow he saw that Matku was sleeping inside his burrow by cordoning it with thorny bushes.

Other rats had similarly closed their burrows' entrances. Chutku was getting restless with hunger but could not find any food. He was cursing himself for his lethargy. He wished that he too had a burrow of his own where he could go and sleep and where he would have stored some food to eat too.

He finally decided that by the next morning he would dig a burrow for himself and thinking of food he started feeling sleepy.

Suddenly, a mosquito bit his ear. Chutku hit his ear with his tail. The mosquito flew away but his ear got hurt. The rat was jolted out of his slumber.

He again tried resuming his sleep but the mosquitoes were troubling him a lot.

In order to save himself, he went around looking for them when a cat saw him. Hiding in a corner she aimed and pounced upon him. Chutku was taken aback and all the ways of saving his life that he knew went blank from his memory.

Fortunately, the cat's paws, instead of hitting him, hit the thorny bush near him and she immediately withdrew it.

In the meantime, Chutku got a chance to escape.

He quickly hid under a bush. The cat kept looking for him. After some time she left.

A snake was sleeping in the bush where Chutku was hiding. He could small a rat and woke up. He looked around but could not see anything.

Chutku saw the snake and out of fear became breathless. He managed to crawl away from the bush.

The rat was stuck in between two dangers. On one side was the snake and on the other was the cat.

Slowly, Chutku entered the lane. Kalu Dog saw that someone was hiding in the darkness and he started barking. Now he was with the third danger.

He was not sure whether he would remain alive today or not to dig his burrow tomorrow.

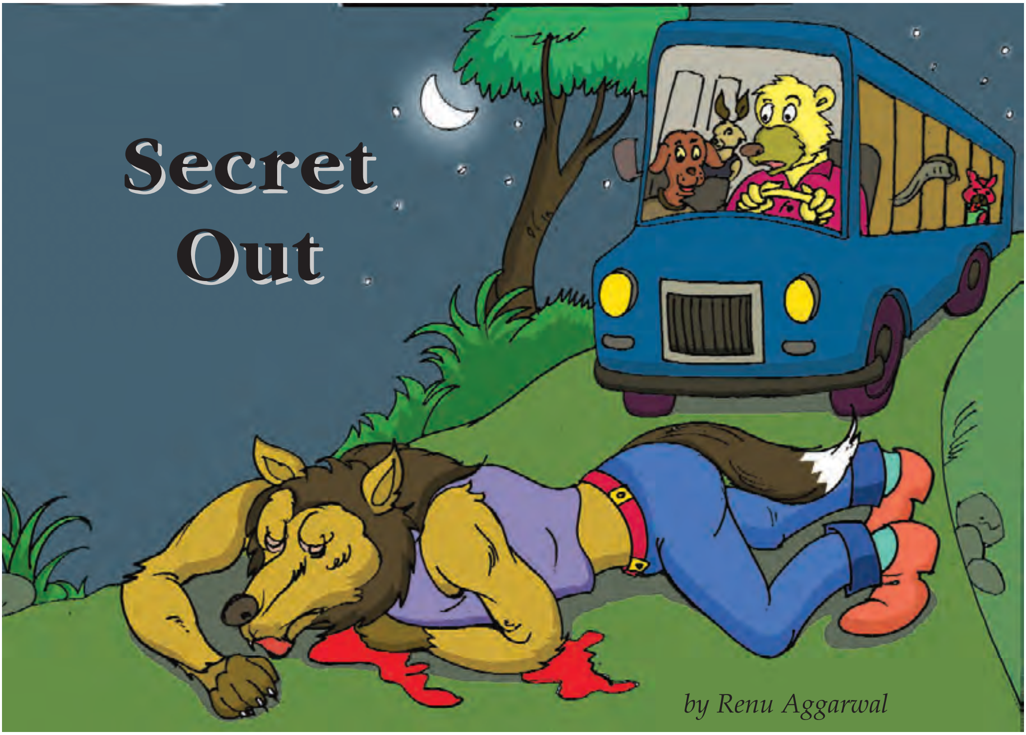

Suddenly, clouds hovered on the sky and the lightning struck sharp. It started raining.

Chutku took shelter under the neem tree. It was pouring. Chutku was getting wet and he started feeling cold. The other rats were happily sleeping in their burrows and Chutku was sitting under the tree getting wet.

As it dawned, the rain also stopped. All the rats came out to enjoy the lovely weather after the rains. Matku too was enjoying the view. He saw Chutku who was digging his burrow.

Matku ran to him and said, "Good Chutku that you have become sensible in one night."

Other rats too were happy and clapped when they saw Chutku dig his burrow. ●

Secret Out

by Renu Aggarwal

HIRA BEAR was a simple, hard-working and clear-hearted bear. He ran a travel agency named Neelu Travel Agency in Champakvan.

Hira had employed drivers for running his buses but he drove one of the buses himself as he loved driving a bus.

When he drove his bus on the open, broad tree lined roads of the forest, he felt a kind of renewed energy and freshness into his body. As a result the day went off happy and fruitful.

One day, there was a fair in the neighbouring forest Nandanvan. The fair went on till late and Hira's buses were kept up late too.

As Hira was returning with his last bus to Champakvan, he saw an animal lying on the street in the brightness of his headlight. He halted the bus with a jerk. Suddenly with the jolt the sleeping passengers woke up.

"What happened? Why has the bus stopped? Is everything all right, Hira?" everyone was asking.

As Hira got down to have a close look at the bus, other animals too got down behind him.

"Oh, he is hurt."

"He has probably fainted. Lots of blood has come out."

"Nobody knows which jungle he belongs to?"

"Somebody, bring water for him to drink."

Water was sprinkled on him but he did not gain consciousness.

They could not have left him in this state so they picked up the badly hurt jackal and put him in the bus.

The bus again started and with fresh breeze the jackal started gaining consciousness. Before they could reach Champakvan, he opened his eyes.

All passengers had left except for Hira and the hurt jackal.

Hira took him to his place and provided him first-aid.

The next day when the jackal woke up, Hira introduced himself, "Hello friend. How are you now? I am Hira Bear. I saw you yesterday on the way. How did you get hurt?"

"I am Peru. While I was returning from the fair yesterday, some masked thieves beat me up badly and looted all my things," Peru groaned with pain.

"Where is your house? Since yesterday, you have not gone home. Your family must be worrying for you," Hira reminded.

"I have no one of mine, I am alone."

"So, till the time you recover, you can stay put here. I too live all by myself," Hira said.

"Well, thanks," Peru closed his eyes.

Hira looked after injured Peru with great dedication. He would everyday dress him up and give him good food to eat self-cooked.

In the beginning Peru was actually weak and incapable but as he started recovering, he started getting evil thoughts in his mind. He thought of taking advantage of Hira's service.

He would pretend that he was very weak and that he had terrible pain in his entire body.

Getting to eat for free and without any labour, he now did not want to work anymore.

When Hira went away to work, Peru would happily watch TV or go out into the forest to roam.

After the whole day’s work Hira would come home, cook food for Peru and himself but the jackal would not help him.

Sometimes Hira did realise that he had done a mistake by keeping Peru at his place but then thinking that he was not well, a feeling of guilt creeped into his heart on thinking bad.

One day, Hira remembered that honey had finished at his home so he went out in search for beehives. When the bees saw the ever smiling and happy Hira disappointed and worried they asked, “What happened, dear Hira? Why are you sad?”

Hira enumerated all the story to them.

“That is all? We are there to help you. Now you see our spying skills,” the bees assured.

Hira retuned home happily contended.

That very night the bees made a small hive in Hira's house and started spying.

The next day Hira went away early with his bus.

Peru quickly had his meals, watched TV and went out for a stroll in the jungle. He was appearing hail and healthy. In the evening he came back and lay on his bed.

When the bees told him about Peru's activities

Hira became dead sure that Peru was taking advantage of his goodness.

He along with the bees thought of teaching Peru a lesson.

The next day, the beehive became a little larger and some bees were seen hovering around.

Hira was not afraid but Peru surely was. "What is this, Hira? I am as it is unwell and on top of that these bees have come here. Please remove them."

Hira replied, "I have kept them as tenants and they will from now on stay here."

"Why do you need tenants? You already have a good and steady income from your buses."

"Now you are also living with me and things are more expensive."

"But they might stick to me and sting. I will not be able to run because of weakness."

"Good," and Hira laughed and clapped. With the gesture the bees started hovering around Peru. With fright he ran towards the river and jumped in.

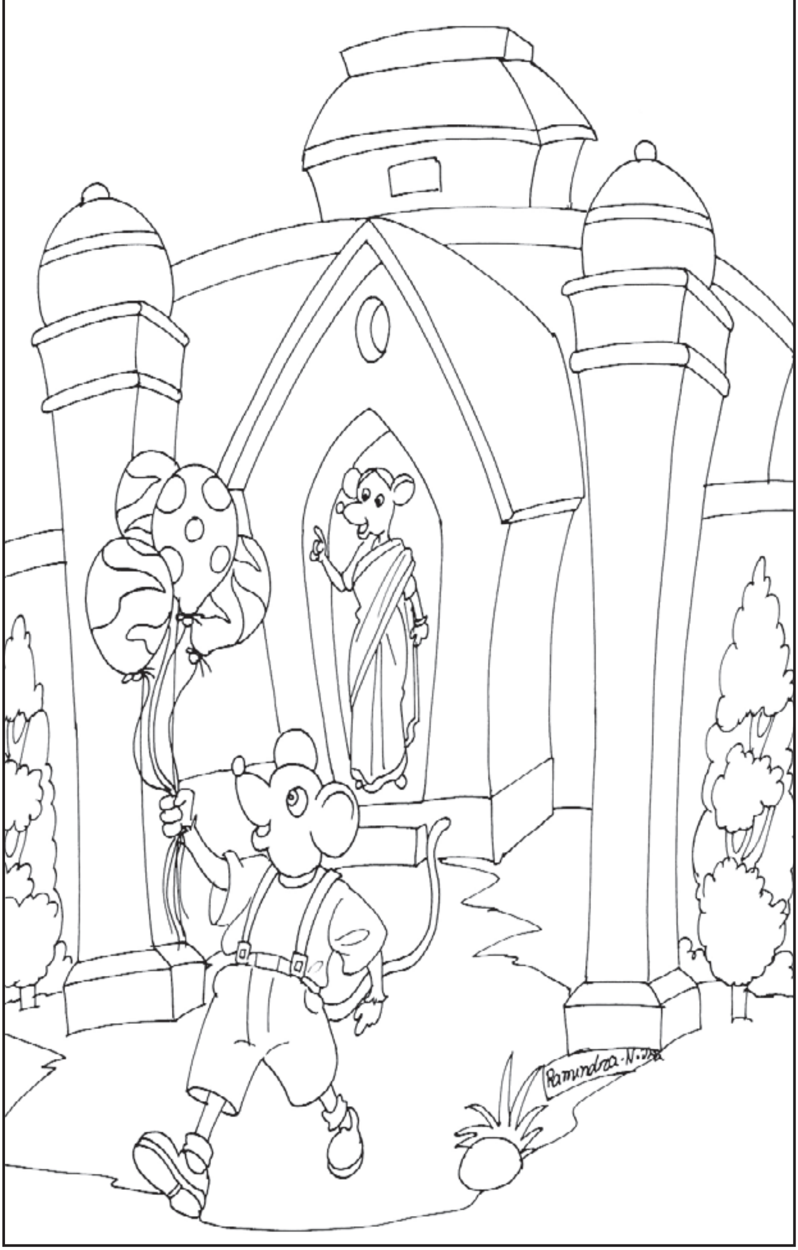

Hira went and took out Peru from water and screamed loudly, "Liar, you are perfectly all right and are only shaming. I have come to know all your clever plans."

Realising that his secret plan was out, Peru felt ashamed of himself.

He said to Hira, "You are really very good. In the beginning I really needed your help but later I started enjoying your services. I am sorry. But now I want to become your true friend. Will you forgive me?"

And Hira forgave him. ●

Jumpy's Scheme

by Indrajit Kaushik

EARLIER, JUMPY Monkey lived on a tree where he was always in fear of falling down. The trouble doubled in rainy days. Everything went bad in the sound of dripping water.

To get rid of these difficulties, Jumpy thought of making his own house. Collecting all his earnings, he made a very beautiful wooden house for himself.

He was very happy in his new house. It was huge and had everything in it.

One day, Fatty Elephant came to Jumpy. "You know I cannot climb the stairs. I would feel obliged if you let me stay on the ground floor of your house."

"Then where will my family stay?" Jumpy asked.

"You can comfortably live in the upper portion. I will live below, take care of your house and pay rent too," Fatty exclaimed. Hearing Fatty's sweet talks, Jumpy agreed.

In the beginning, Fatty stayed decently. But after some days, he started showing his true colours. He stopped paying rent.

"Papa, I am not able to study because of this loud noise. I have a test tomorrow. Please get the music stopped," Jumpy's son Titu said, as he was getting disturbed.

"I have bought this music system with my money. I will use it as I like. Who are you to stop me?" Fatty replied bluntly to Jumpy.

Poor Titu could not help. The noise was hurting his ears. Others in the house too were highly upset.

Next day, Jumpy was having breakfast with his family. He felt as if the earth shook. All eatables were scattered on the floor. Jumpy too just stopped short of falling. Titu got hurt on his head.

Jumpy understood that this was Fatty's doing. He came down in anger and saw that Fatty was dancing and playing the music system in full volume.

The wooden house shook when Fatty, who was so fat as his name suggests, was dancing on the loud music.

"What nonsense is this? Get out of my house just now," Jumpy shouted.

"It is good for health to dance on music and it is harmful to get angry. I would advise you also to dance with me," Fatty laughed.

"Stop talking nonsense and get out or…."

"Or what? What will you do? Dare to take me out and you see. Pray that it may not happen the other way round that I throw all of you out," Fatty threatened.

"This is the way you are returning my favour? I gave you place to live in my house," Jumpy was cursing the moment when he had given the house to Fatty. He did not know what to do now.

With a new trouble, Fatty was troubling Jumpy everyday so that Jumpy may leave the house and go and he would capture the place.

Jumpy thought, 'Even on my explaining to him Fatty is not understanding and his mischiefs are increasing day by day. I will have to tackle him differently.'

Jumpy thought of a plan. It is always wiser to confront a strong enemy with the power of the mind.

And he went to meet his friend Blacky Ant in its burrow. Telling him his problem, Jumpy asked Blacky for help.

Blacky assured, "You don't worry at all. I will help you anyway to teach Fatty a lesson."

Thanking Blacky, Jumpy replied, "I expected that from you."

The next day, Blacky called all the ants of the jungle and explained them everything. The army of ants entered Jumpy's house soon on getting a signal from Blacky.

"Oh, so many ants?" Fatty was afraid. "Where are you all entering?"

Blacky replied, "We are all Jumpy's guests. From now on we all will live here in our friend's house."

In no time, the whole house was filled with ants. Fatty could only see ants wherever his eyes fell.

"Jumpy, take them out from here. You know how frightened I am of ants. If anyone entered my trunk, I will not be able to do anything," Fatty said to Jumpy.

"They are my guests and they will stay here only. Aren't you ashamed of being scared of them. They are so small and you are so big and strong," controlling his laugh Jumpy retorted.

Fatty was highly upset at seeing the army of ants. Forgetting dancing and singing now, he was only dreaming that ants may not get inside his trunk.

With this tension in his mind, Fatty started appearing weak and unwell. Highly upset Fatty left Jumpy's house, never to return and was never seen again.

Jumpy's plan was successful. With his wisdom he was successful in getting rid of Fatty.

"Thanks for helping me, friend. Do remember me in case you are in need," Jumpy thanked other ants along with Blacky.

After completing their work, the ants returned to their place. Jumpy again started his life afresh happily in his house. ●

The Python

"GAGAN, LOOK at the house. Why is there so much crowd? Surely, there is something wrong. Come on, let us see," returning home after a picnic from Mangalvan, Kanchan said.

"Yes sure, we must go. Maybe, someone is in trouble and we are able to help, " Rajat said.

"Let us see," Gagan asked the driver to turn towards the house.

by Raj Kumar Dhar

"Where is this bus going, getting down the road?" children were petrified.

"Don't worry, we will soon return. We are just going till that house," Gagan tried to pacify them. The bus halted at a place which was crowded with people and the children got down.

"Son, a python has entered this house and is not coming out. He has swallowed a cat and is sleeping. We are all upset since morning. It is evening now. If the python does not come out, the residents of the house will have to take shelter somewhere else tonight," a villager said.

"What is that baba doing in that crowd?" pointing out to a man, Kanchan asked.

"He is a blessed Maharaj. We have called him from far off lands. He has good knowledge of magic hymns and herbs to ward off evil. He will shoo away the python by some rituals. He has been saving us from floods, drought, diseases and spirits since many years. Come, you too see how the baba does away with the snake," the villager said.

The children went to baba who told them, "There is no python, it is some evil who has taken this shape to destroy the village."

The innocent villagers were frightened. They pleaded, "Save us from this evil, Maharaj."

"Well, but in order to get rid of the evil, you will have to prepare for some fire worship. I will meditate for 24 hours which will cost a sum of 10 thousand rupees minimum."

"You don't worry about money, Maharaj. Start your meditation. We will arrange for the money by contribution," people offered.

"No, you people do not have to spend a single penny. I will shoo away the python," Kanchan came up and offered.

Baba looked at Kanchan angrily and then said to the villagers, "Tell these fools to vanish or all my plan will spoil."

"We will go baba, don't worry. And yes we will take you with us. But first, let us address the problems of these villagers," Kanchan smiled and asked the landlady of the house, "Do you have onion and garlic in the house, aunty?"

"Yes son, I have it."

"Make a paste of them, quick," Kanchan requested.

The landlady quickly prepared a paste. Kanchan wrapped the paste into a piece of cloth and tying it up to a stick, asked courageously, "Where is the python? Take me to him."

The crowd was watching breathlessly. The baba was continuously staring angrily at Kanchan. The boy reached near the snake without bothering about the baba. He had the villagers and his friends with him.

Kanchan extended the pouch of paste at one end of the stick near the nose of the python. With its strong smell the python moved a little. Kanchan kept the stick close to his nose for him to smell.

The python shuddered and writhed. He could not tolerate the smell and thought of running away. People were stunned seeing him move out. The snake was scared seeing the crowd. He was hit upon his back once or twice with the stick.

Now it was the turn of the baba. As he tried running, the villagers caught him and beat him black and blue, "This imposter is cheating us. He has been scaring us and cashing upon it since ages. He has gulped down thousands of rupees.

Now we will hand over the imposter to the police. God bless this child who has got us rid from this trouble without a penny."

Gagan said, "We are science students. The chemical that comes out by churning onion and garlic together in a paste is called Allyl Sulphide. Its strong pungent smell keeps away pythons and other snakes. Whenever you are faced with this kind of a trouble, try this solution that too without spending a penny. Do not get carried away by such imposters."

"We have become aware. Now we will not listen and believe in any imposter," and the villagers praised the children and bid them goodbye happily.

They then handed over the baba to the police. ●

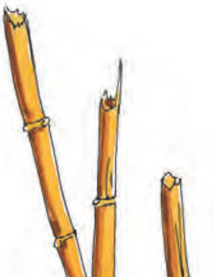

Whity's Plan

by Indrajit Kaushik

ONE DAY, Champakvan was struck by a great storm. Trees were uprooted and nests of many a birds were blown away in the strong winds.

A branch of a tree fell on Chuchu Rabbit's house and his entire family got buried under it. Only Whity was left. Whity was very small but he did not lose hope. Some animals of the jungle, out of pity, wished to give him some money but Whity refused to take them.

'With the help of these alms, a few days can be spent but life has to run only by working.'

Thinking so, Whity started searching for some work. His eyes suddenly fell on a sieve that had blown in the storm and come to him. Seeing the strong sieve made of bamboo, Whity got an idea.

A river flowed through Champakvan which joined Sundervan on the other side. Whity made a boat out of the sieve and put it in the river.

Making the duck, squirrel and small animals sit in his nano boat, Whity started rowing the boat to the other side of the river.

The money that he earned out of ferrying, made Whity earn his bread. Animals of the jungle were very happy at Whity's sincerity and hard work.

One day, Browny Wolf came by. On seeing Whity and his boat, he went close to it. The rabbit made him cross the river. When Whity asked for his fare, Browny refused paying it.

“Fare? What fare? Dare ask me for next and you will repent.”

“Look brother, this is my work. If I don't earn money from my work what will I eat. It costs 5 rupees. You may give a little less,” Whity said.

But Browny left without paying a penny. Now he started doing this everyday. He would climb into Whity's boat whenever he felt like and would get down without paying anything. Seeing Browny sitting in the boat other small animals were afraid boarding the same. Whity's work started suffering loss. He could not understand how to tackle Browny.

“If you make too much noise I will devour you. So keep doing your work quietly,” Browny almost threatened Whity when he demanded money.

Whity could not come to terms with Browny's behaviour. He thought, ‘If the enemy is stronger, he should be defeated with wisdom.’

Whity made a plan. He made a big hole on the bottom of his boat and then closed it with some mud and covered it with cloth.

Now it was not visible. As usual as Whity put down his boat in the water, Browny turned up.

"I have not had my first customer, you come later," Whity said indifferently, knowing that Browny will not listen to him.

"To hell with your first customer. I am getting late. Come on fast or…" and Browny held Whity's neck.

"Leave my neck, it is suffocating. You can sit in my boat," Whity said.

Seeing his bullying work, Browny quickly sat in Whity's boat. Whity also rowed as fast as he could. He wanted his boat to reach the middle of the river in the deepest part as soon as possible so that his plan could work faster.

On the other hand, as the mud in the hole started diluting in water, it was totally removed when the boat reached the centre of the river. Water from the river started seeping in the boat.

Browny became nervous seeing the boat fill with water. "Take the boat to the bank soon, it is about to drown. I don't know to swim. Hurry up."

"I know that you do not know to swim. That is why I had made a hole in the boat to make it your last trip," and Whity quickly jumped out of the boat. "Now enjoy the result of your doing."

"You cannot do like this. Help me. I am drowning," Browny shouted and screamed.

"Bye bye, see you later," Whity swam to the banks.

The rabbit heaved a sigh of relief finally, getting rid of Browny who troubled him everyday. With his savings he got a new boat. Once again Whity became busy in ferrying animals across the river in his boat.

Beating his enemy with his wisdom Whity proved that whatever the trouble one must faced it bravely. ●

Proud Tappu

by Anil Satija

THE FARMHOUSE of Ganpat Lal was very big. There were trees of various kinds in it and it had many small and big animals. They all lived happily together.

Tappu Chicken was the son of Honey Hen. He may have just been born a few days back but he had developed a sense of false pride and arrogance. He was not scared of anyone on the earth.

One day, Tappu was having a walk outside his coop. A piece of bread was lying a little distance away. Kalu Crow came to pick that piece to eat.

"You scoundrel, what are you doing outside my coop? Get away from here," Tappu screamed. By now Kalu had already picked up the bread piece and flown off.

"Wow! What awe I have among the animals. He ran away quickly perhaps frightened of me," Tappu was highly elated at the thought.

One day, a wild cat was hiding somewhere and was frightened of a dog. Tappu accidentally saw her, "You glutton, vanish from here. Don't you know me?"

The cat did not pay any attention.

"Did not you hear me? Wait, I will show you," Tappu arrogantly advanced towards her. By then the cat jumped and ran away.

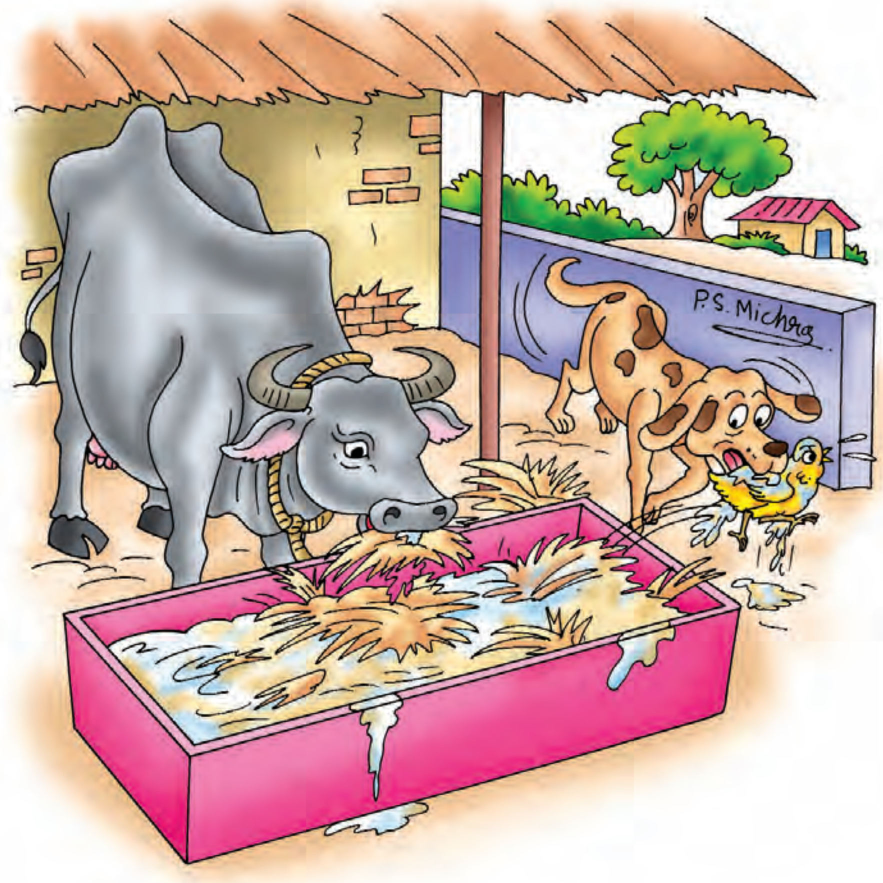

Tappu was again happy to see that the cat had fled. 'She has run away as she was scared of me,' Tappu thought.

The chicken now started assuming that all were afraid of him and that no one had the courage of confront him.

Manno Goat was grazing green grass at the farmhouse. Some distance from her children of Ganpat Lal were playing bat and ball.

"You foolish goat, are not you hesitant to graze grass in front of me? Don't you know who I am?" showing his big eyes, Tappu said, "O, so your life is not dear to you. All big and small animals are scared of me. This is the last warning. Get away from me," saying, Tappu moved ahead a little.

Suddenly, the ball, children were playing with, hit Manno. On getting hurt, the goat too ran away.

Tappu had not seen the ball. Seeing Manno too run away, Tappu returned saying, "She has run away or she would have seen the result of confronting me."

This way Tappu became arrogant day by day. He started thinking himself very powerful and full of authority.

Seeing this habit of Tappu, Rocky Dog advised, "Look Tappu, the result of false pride is very bad. You must not be arrogant everywhere. It is a bad habit. Listen to me and change yourself."

But Tappu did not listen and behaved the same way every time.

Some distance away from Tappu's coop lived

Santo Buffalo. Ganpat Lal always tied Santo in its barn. There was a big plastic tub lying near her and was filled with water. Tappu happened to come there once.

"Everyone has acknowledged my superiority but this buffalo has never accepted it ever. I will teach her a lesson right now."

Tappu kept shouting at Santo for a long time but to no avail. Tappu got more annoyed. He came flying and sat on the tub's edge to scream at the buffalo.

By then Ganpat Lal arrived there with fodder for the buffalo. He had not seen Tappu till then. He put the fodder on the ground and went away. With a push of the fodder and hay, Tappu fell inside the tub.

Santo mixed the fodder with its mouth in the water. Tappu, getting mixed with the fodder, started shouting. But Santo was eating away in her own happy mood. Just a few more minutes and Tappu would drown.

Suddenly, Rocky Dog came running from somewhere. He managed to take out Tappu by holding him in his mouth delicately with a lot of effort and difficulty.

Tappu was drenched badly with his head hanging. All his pride has suffered and finally vanished.

"Rocky uncle, you are right that bad habits have a bad result."

"I am happy that you have understood early enough. Now go and rest a while," stroking his hands on Tappu's head lovingly, Rocky gave him some solace.

Tappu came back to his coop. This small incident had crushed Tappu's false pride. ●

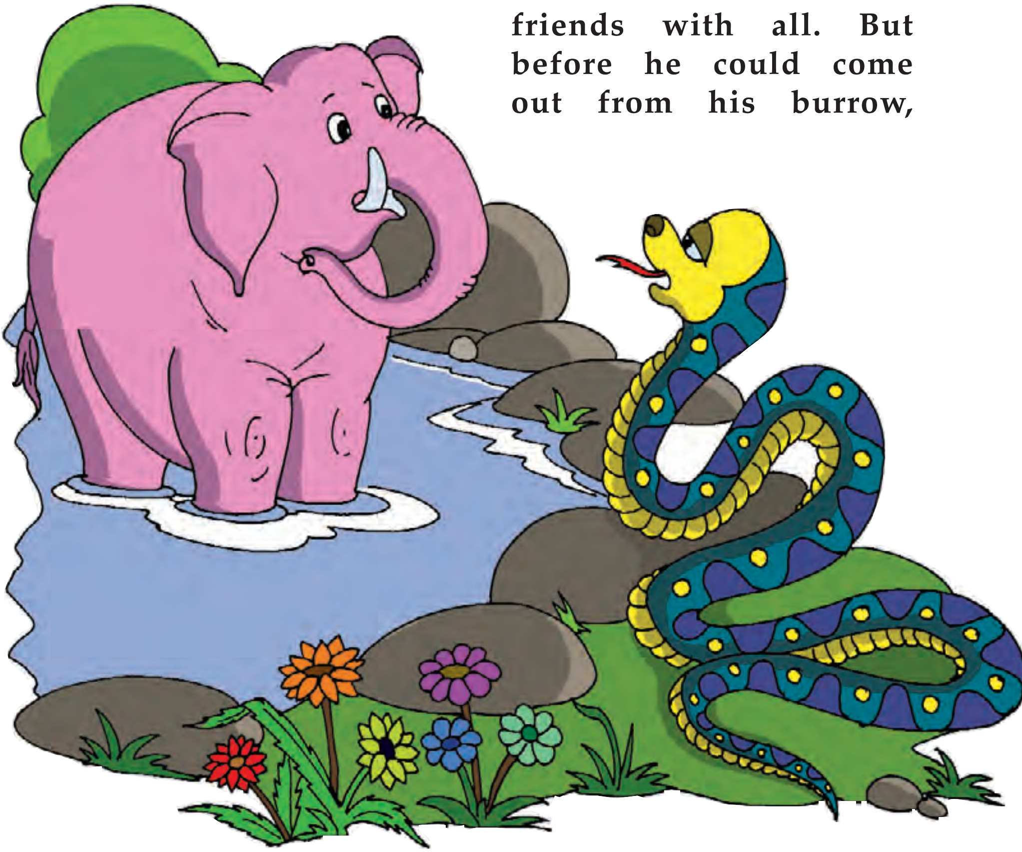

Friendship

by Gyandev Mukesh

EVERYONE IS frightened of snakes thinking that they all are poisonous and bite without reason. But this is not true.

Once a snake sneaked inside Champakvan from somewhere.

On having seen him, the other animals of Champakvan hid from the reptile. The snake was alone and wanted to make friends with all. But before he could come out from his burrow, everyone panicked and ran helter-skelter.

The snake had heard that the old elephant in the jungle was a sensible animal. He thought of meeting him. One day, the elephant was bathing in the lake. The snake reached there. He hissed and saluted the elephant.

The elephant too thought the same as others about the snake in the jungle. But he was not scared. He came before him and asked, "What is the matter? How are you here early in the morning?"

The snake cried, "I am a snake and have come from the town. My friends have lost their lives at the hands of man. I am alone here and want that the jungle animals make friends with me."

The elephant said, "You look gentle. I can believe that you will not bite anyone. But how can I trust you that even without reason you will not bite anyone."

The snake said, "I am not poisonous. You can test me if you want."

The elephant said, "Who in the jungle will want to put his life in danger?"

The snake replied, "There must be someone surely in the jungle who believes that all snakes are not poisonous."

The elephant said, "Sorry brother, I will not be able to help you."

A disappointed snake slowly crawled towards his burrow. He suddenly saw something white in between the green grass. He went close. "This is a rabbit. How sweet it is!"

Something sharp had pierced the rabbit. The snake took it out with his teeth. The rabbit finally was relieved. He thanked the snake.

Rabbit said to the snake, “You are very nice. You have helped me. But I have never seen you before.”

The snake replied, “I am new to the jungle.”

Rabbit asked, “Who are your friends?”

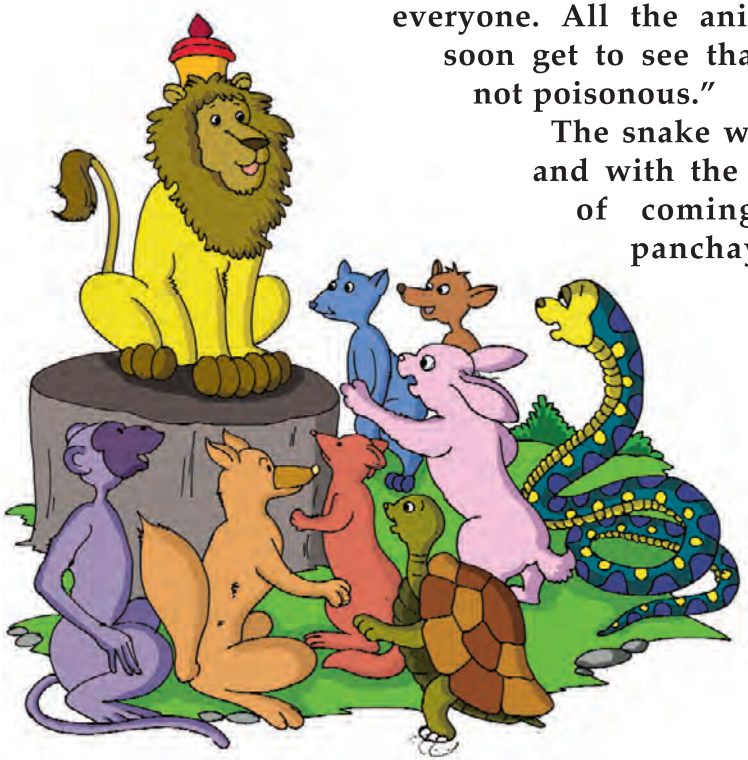

Disappointed snake said, “No one in this jungle.”

The rabbit extended his hand and said, “From today I am your friend. So tell me friend how can I help you?”

The snake was too happy. He said, “I want to make everyone my friend in the jungle. But everyone is frightened of me and thinks that I am poisonous and will bite them.”

The rabbit said, “But you did not do that to me. You took out thorn from my leg. I am sure you are not poisonous. Tomorrow a panchayat will be held in the morning in the jungle. You too be there and bite me in front of everyone. All the animals will soon get to see that you are not poisonous.”

The snake was excited and with the assurance of coming to the panchayat next day returned to his burrow.

Next morning, the rabbit brought the snake along with him in the panchayat. Everyone started moving out on seeing the snake. The rabbit assured, "There is no need to be frightened. I have tied a cloth over his mouth."

The animals were felt better and they settled down. King Sher Singh came too and the panchayat started. Taking permission from Sher Singh the rabbit said, "Your Majesty, this snake should be allowed to join our meeting. I can assure you that he is not poisonous."

Sher Singh said, "You will have to prove it."

The rabbit opened the snake's mouth and ordered, "Friend, bite me. Nothing will happen to me. This will be a proof of you not being poisonous."

Everyone was amazed at the rabbit's initiative. Sher Singh had a first-aid box with an anti-venom medicine and so he allowed the snake to bite the rabbit. The snake bit the rabbit. With everything going as usual till the evening the rabbit was well all through.

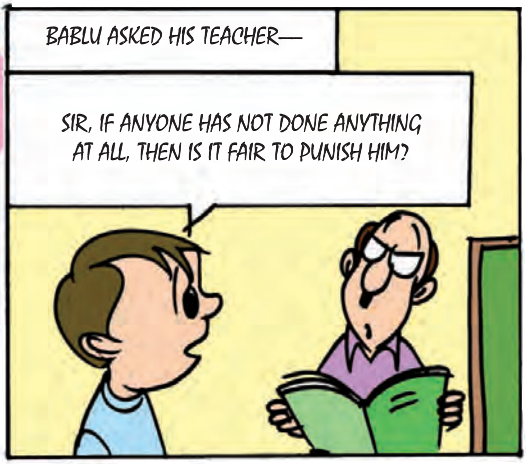

Now everyone was assured that they were not in danger from the snake. All came one by one to shake hands with the snake. Snake's happiness knew no bounds.

The panchayat ended and everyone left for their homes. Snake and rabbit were together. The snake had tears in his eyes. He said, "Animals of the jungle have made friends with me based on proof but you made friends based on trust. Your friendship is exemplary. I will always be obliged." ●

PUNISHMENT

BY KHALIL

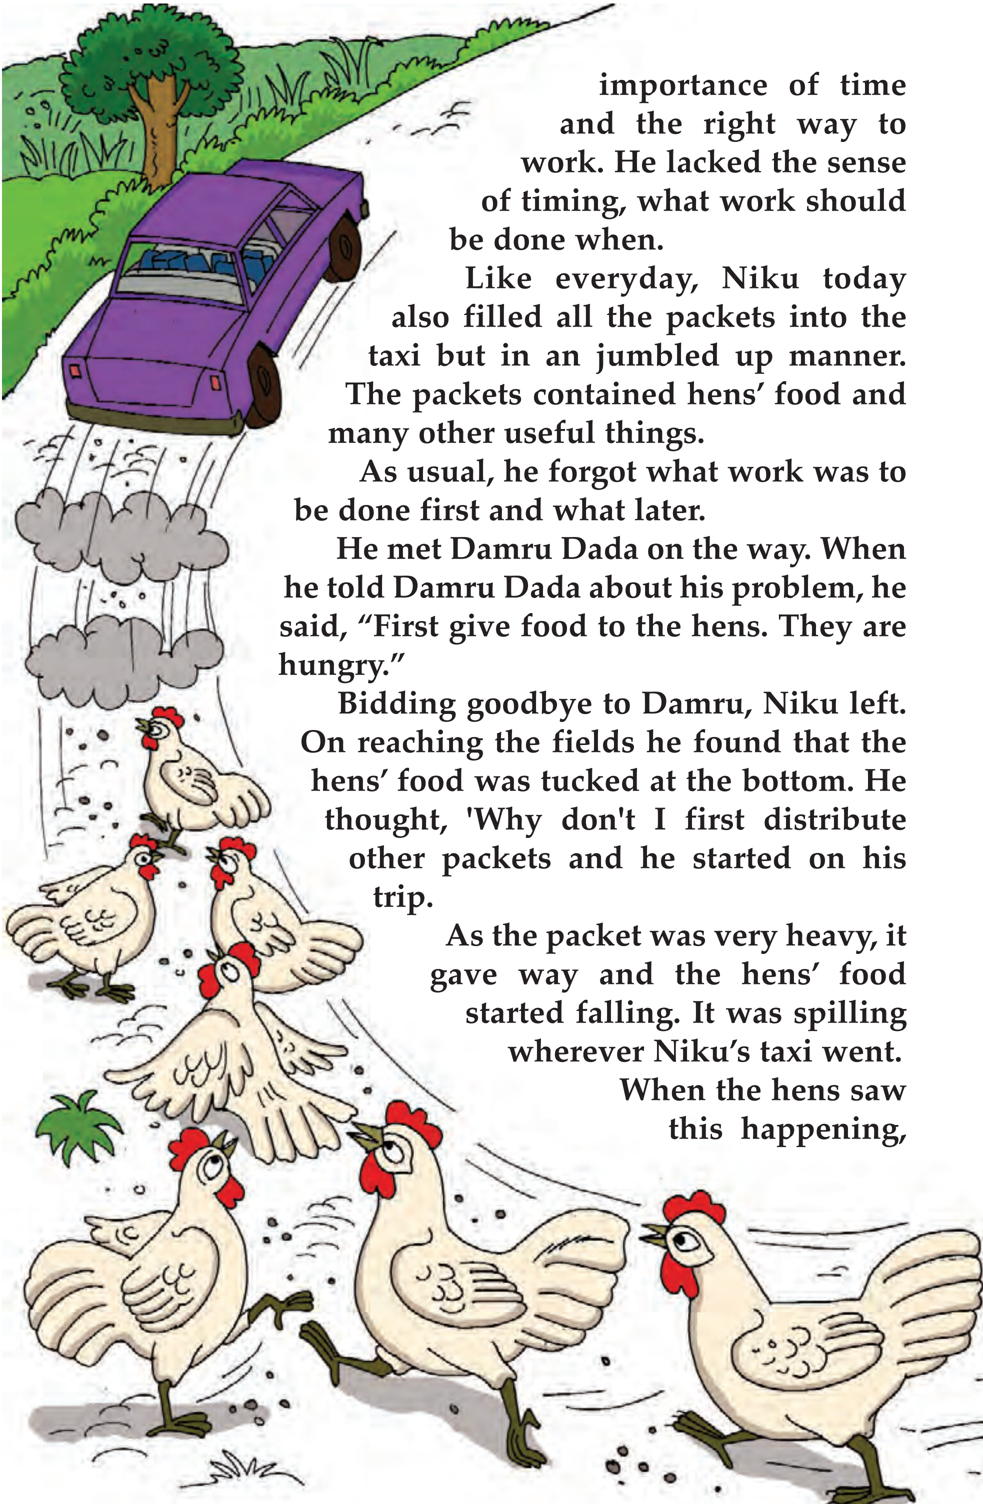

Importance of Time

by Shalu

NIKU WAS a taxi driver in Champakvan. He was kind-hearted, hard-working, honest and was always cheerful.

His work was to pick up and distribute all packets from the railway station to each house of Champakvan. The only drawback in him was that he did not understand the importance of time and the right way to work. He lacked the sense of timing, what work should be done when.

Like everyday, Niku today also filled all the packets into the taxi but in an jumbled up manner. The packets contained hens' food and many other useful things.

As usual, he forgot what work was to be done first and what later.

He met Damru Dada on the way. When he told Damru Dada about his problem, he said, "First give food to the hens. They are hungry."

Bidding goodbye to Damru, Niku left. On reaching the fields he found that the hens' food was tucked at the bottom. He thought, 'Why don't I first distribute other packets and he started on his trip.

As the packet was very heavy, it gave way and the hens' food started falling. It was spilling wherever Niku's taxi went. When the hens saw this happening, they charged on the dropped food.

Now the hens spread in the entire Champakvan. Suddenly, Damru Dada called out Niku. He made him realise what he had done.

Then Dada advised him, "You take the taxi back to the field. The hens will follow the food and go back to the fields," Niku did as said and heaved a sigh of relief.

Damru Dada suggested to Niku, "Look Niku, first plan your mode of working, then complete the work according to the time available. You can take help from someone. Time is precious. Do not waste it like that."

From then on Niku worked as told by Damru Dada, realising the importance of time. ●

Teddy and Honey

by Manoj Rai

A BEAR named Teddy lived in the hilly regions of Champakvan. He had a coat of brown hair on his entire body. He loved being in his den all the time. He would only come out when he was hungry. He preferred sleeping inside all day.

'Tup...tup...tup,' the sound of water early in the morning woke him up. He saw that it was raining outside. He was very happy but he realised that he was hungry. He tried coming out of the den. As it was raining heavily, he went inside and slept off. But he could not sleep. He came out again.

The ground was slushy due to rains. But he had no choice. In the rain he got wet and started feeling cold and shivered. There were some dense trees ahead in which rain too could not penetrate. He went in that direction. He looked around and skywards but could not see anything to eat. On top of that, the branch of the tree was hurting him.

He spotted beehives hanging from the tree. He was excited.

"Oh, honey!" words came out instantly. But the bees were swarming all around. He tried to lay hands on the honey. He had a scare that if he touched the bees, they would sting him.

He thought of a plan. With the help of the branch he tried to drop a hive. As expected the bees got provoked.

Teddy saw that a swarm of bees was hovering over his head. He ran with awe but the bees were in no mood to spare him.

His eyes suddenly fell on a hollow trunk of a tree. Teddy tucked himself inside it and kept hiding in it for some time. He built up courage to peep out and the bees again got after him. "It seems I will have to spend my entire life here," Teddy murmured.

He suddenly hit on a plan. With full force he ran towards the lake. By the time the bees could reach him, he jumped into the lake.

He popped out from the water to see that the bees were waiting for him outside. He decided again and taking a deep breath he started swimming in reverse direction inside the water. The bees did not have an idea like this and kept waiting outside on this side of the bank.

Teddy came out from the other side and ran. He again reached the same forest where the beehives were hanging. He looked around to find no one. He quickly broke a branch and dropped a big hive. With the hive on his back he ran towards his den. That afternoon he had a feast of honey. He realised how foolish was he to have been lazy to keep sleeping in the den and losing on all finer things of life. ●

Cricket

Cricket, Cricket!
Everywhere, here, there, everywhere.

Dhoni is the best,
He takes everyone's test.

Harbhajan is also the best,
But oh, he creates a lot of mess!

Rahul Dravid, what to say about him?
He is so slim and trim.

Sachin Tendulkar, he always hits a six,
I think he plays a trick.

Yuvraj Singh, Oh, I think he is the best player of all,
That is why he missed the ball.

Sreeshanth, Oh! Harbhajan slapped him so tightly,
That he did not take this lightly.

I think cricketers have a common chemistry,
That is why they had a victory.

"VOW! I got one more coin," Whity Rabbit felt delighted, while playing carrom. His twin brother Naughty Rabbit was playing a computer game.

Smart Devils

by Anil Satija

"What is there to feel delighted? You only are going to get all the coins, as you are playing all alone."

"Mummy and Papa have not returned home yet. They had said that they would return by 10 and now it is already 10.30."

"They have gone to attend the wedding, it takes time. Relax, I am there with you. You don't worry."

"I am not scared. Let them return at their own convenience."

"I know you get scared even when a small cockroach crawls by your feet," Naughty teased Whity.

Suddenly, the doorbell rang.

" I think parents are back," said Naughty Rabbit.

Whity Rabbit went to answer the bell and asked, "Who is there?"

"I am your father's friend. I have travelled a long distance to meet him. Open the door," came the sweet voice from outside.

"But Papa is not home. You please visit tomorrow as it is very late to call on anybody."

"O.K fine, I will come tomorrow. At least, can I have some water? I am very thirsty."

Whity went to the kitchen and fetched water for the visitor at the door. He opened the door.

Suddenly, Kaptu Wolf pushed Whity Rabbit who had opened the door. Whity Rabbit fell down. Baddy Cheetah also barged in and bolted the door from inside.

"So you were acting very smart? You were not opening the door. See, all your smartness has gone for a six," said Baddy Cheetah and trained his revolver at the 2 brothers.

"None of you try even to move or else you are dead. Don't try to be smart. Do you understand what I am saying?"

"O.K., hurry up now and get us all the cash, jewellery and valuables in the house."

Naughty Rabbit was scared to death to find him in an unexpected situation. His mind stopped working and stood like statue. But Whity Rabbit was thinking fast how to handle the situation and how to get out of it.

"Look uncle, the valuables are here only. But when our parents go out, they keep all the jewellery and cash in a bag and hang it on the tree in the courtyard outside."

"What nonsense? You are trying to fool us. Does anybody handle his cash, jewllery this way?" said Baddy angrily.

"Believe me, it is true. If you don't find the bag outside, you can punish me the way you want. Why I won't love my life? Why would I lie?"

"I think the little rabbit is speaking truth. What is harm in checking? Let us check it out," said Baddy.

Kaptu and Baddy went out to satisfy themselves. When Baddy saw the tree in little light out in the compound, he felt happy. "It seems rabbit is speaking truth. I can see bag-like object on the tree. I am climbing the tree and you take care of these rabbits."

Baddy started climbing the tree. Whity Rabbit held the hand of Naughty Rabbit and started moving towards the door. Greedy Kaptu was busy looking at the bag on the tree.

As Baddy reached near the bag-like object, he tried to grab it. But he was not at all prepared for what was there in store for him.

"Help... help..." Baddy started shouting. Actually, the object which looked like a bag was not a bag but it was a beehive.

Thousands of honeybees had surrounded Baddy and were stinging him all over his body. He was still shouting for help. He was in great pain. He lost his balance and fell down on Kaptu. Both of them were badly injured as they broke their limbs.

While the robbers were fooled by Whity Rabbit, he bolted the door from inside. They raised the alarm which attracted their neighbours' attention. They gathered to help them.

Whity Rabbit borrowed his neighbour's mobile phone and called up his father and said," Papa, on the way back get the police along with you. Till then the honeybees will be a good host to our visitors."

The faces of Baddy and Kaptu were swollen with stings and they were in pain. They were left with no strength to move.

Soon, the police also arrived.

"First, please take us to the hospital, then you can take us to the police station," said Kaptu.

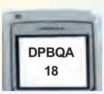

"We had lost our mind to get involved with these 2 devils. I will leave this stealing business ever. I will earn my bread and butter by working hard," said Baddy.

Everybody laughed at their submission. Inspector Jumbo Elephant congratulated Whity Rabbit and Naughty Rabbit for their bravery and presence of mind to get the robbers arrested. ●
